

You Are Blessed

You might judge yourself or your situation, but actually you are making great progress. If you feel like you are stumbling from time to time, it is because you are growing, you are breaking free from past constraints and becoming more fully and freely yourself. This is brave. Be proud, even of your stumbles. You do not need to criticise yourself or the process in any way. Remember that whatever your heart yearns for is what the Universe wants for you, too. The way it can best manifest might be different to what you expect, and that's okay. You can trust in your unfolding destiny. It is safe and wise to allow it to move you.

It Shall Manifest

Our true progress on our path can be hidden under the ordinary day-to-day and not-quite-feeling-you-are-there-yet moments. Those are the all-important times when we are building our spiritual muscles. Faith, courage, trust, determination, commitment, patience and serenity grow in the face of challenge and uncertainty. As these spiritual muscles grow and exert themselves, the physical world responds by taking shape and responding to our inner power. Your soul is coming to life in the world, and your heart's desires will manifest. You may fear sometimes, but there is a greater hand guiding your course and it is safe to trust it. Keep going.

No Need to Worry

Fear tends to add to one's confusion and makes things seem far more complicated than they are in truth. The Universe knows what you need, and you are being guided toward fulfilment, daily. Everything you have and are right now, is enough to take your next step. So, do what you can do now. Trust in the power of your process. Whether you recognise it or not, you are making progress. Even when your mind doubts or worries about choices made or an uncertain future, you can choose to trust that it is all working out, somehow. What you need shall be provided. Keep connecting to your true self. Know that you are guided and protected so that you can take your life journey.

Answered Prayer

The oracle brings soothing guidance that something more beautiful wants to manifest in your world. Reassure yourself that any chaos or disorder is the Universe speaking to you, saying, “I want to improve something for you, let me do it.” Here’s a secret: If you don’t try to control it, you may actually come to enjoy the creative, sometimes messy, process of healing change. The changes happening for you are part of how your prayers are being answered. Do not fight against the creation of your own dream! In time, you will see that what seemed like a problem was actually part of the solution.

Let Go

When we hold on too tight, we can suffocate what we want to see flourish in our life.

It can be so helpful to loosen our grip psychologically and emotionally, and to allow for endings to happen. Those endings are the beginnings of new chapters and are guiding you closer to what you seek. Stay connected to your hope. Blessings of healing and comfort are seeking their way in to your heart. No matter how difficult or final things may seem, these blessings will ensure that love and light shall prevail. Let hope nurture your innermost being with comfort and peace. There is another way, but it is yet to be consciously perceived. All is well.

Rely Upon Inner Values Rather Than Social Opinions

The opinions of a collective, be it a culture or other social tribe, can be so widely-accepted that they are falsely recognised as being a kind of law. With the weight of so many in agreement, beliefs and judgements may appear to be worthy of respect. However, the number of people holding an opinion does not proportionally increase its degree of truth, wisdom or helpfulness. Often it is quite the opposite. Living an authentic life, as you were born to live it, will often require you to have the courage to break with societal conditioning and live according to your own inner values. Don't worry what other people are going to think or say. Trust your heart and seek your own counsel.